Excitement in the Panama Scandal.

Continues to Grow.

Marius Fontane Makes a Full Statement of the Affairs.

PARIS, Jan. 7. The Panama scandal continues to grow in magnitude, and although the examinations are secret, enough leaks out to keep up public interest and excitement to the highest pitch. Marius Fontane followed the example of Dr. Lesseps in making a full statement of the Panama canal affairs. The arrest of M. Blondin was due to the avowal by Fontane that Blondin had acted as a go-between in the corruption of Ex-Minister Bihot. The latter, however, persists in denying the charge of corruption. The government's preparations to suppress the scandal in the city is not based upon any apprehension, whatever, of a Republican outbreak, but upon the attempts of the extreme socialists to arouse insurrection.

More Corruption Revealed.

PARIS, Jan. 7. M. De Lahaye published this morning a letter stating that he received a commission to expose the Panama scandal. A certain person came to him, he says, with a fac simile of an original list of the senators and deputies, who had accepted the Panama loan. The list was shown to him, however, upon condition he should not reveal the names, but merely take steps to compel the Chamber of Deputies to undertake the exposure. De Lahaye is that the same events amply confirmed all the statements of his informant. He declares much more remains to be revealed.

ARTIST'S SKETCHES.

Is Waps Nat, a Small Island. There Are Some Pictures of a Village.

From Donabon's Magazine. The prohibition Rapa-Nui appears to have possessed a mania for carving. The rock on the edge of the cliffs at Rapa-Nui are carved in situ into rude forms. Some of the figures are of a human shape, and others are made to represent huge turtles. Here also are platforms of stone used for cremation and low stone houses of great age. From one of these large houses of Rapa-Nui, the British Museum, was taken. Half buried in the earth it was shielded from the ravages of time, and hence it is an excellent state of preservation.

1883 disaster fell upon the natives of Rapa Nui. A number of ships, apparently Peruvian, came to anchor off the shore. They were soon surrounded by canoes, full of laughing natives, ready to trade, talk or fight. A general rush was made. Suddenly the strangers turned their backs and fled. The natives followed them. The unfortunate prisoners, formerly so happy, were taken to the islands to work the guano, where most of them perished. When the Peruvian Government, all too late, caused the survivors to be taken back to their land homes, many died on the way. The natives who survived introduced the small-pox, which ravaged rapidly reduced the stricken population. Since this calamitous outbreak the handful of natives who constitute the population of Rapa Nui are few and far between. The natives on the northwestern slope. Here, although simple-hearted and merry as before, they await inevitable extinction, for the volcanic island must soon be destroyed.

RESCUE OF AN OLD PAINTER.

W. F. Haven yet Purchased Edward Savage's Picture of Washington.

There is now on exhibition at the Avery Galleries, No. 308 Fifth avenue, a rare old picture of Washington, by the family painter of this city, the late Edward Savage, of Princeton, Mass., who was born in 1761 and died in 1817. The picture was painted in Philadelphia in 1793. It is shown in the original frame, which is hand-carved. The picture is well preserved and the colors are still bright. The picture was purchased by William F. Haven, of this city. It has been suggested that the picture be placed in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in Central Park. This is a very desirable suggestion, as the picture is a fine example of the work of a great artist. The picture is a full-length portrait of Washington, standing and facing slightly to the right. He is wearing a military uniform, with a powdered wig. The background is a simple, light-colored wall.
